The Desperate Housewives hairstylist uses extensions to achieve the Wisteria Lane lovelies' perfect 'dos

DESPERATE HOUSEWIVES

Shh! Their big secret — revealed

The women of Wisteria Lane aren't the only ones with secrets. The show's on-set hairstylist, Lisa Marie Rosenberg, has a few, too: She helps the wives "cheat" their way to versatile, perfectly coiffed 'dos with the help of clip-on human-hair extensions by Easihair. "These new extensions allow me to change their looks without actually changing their hair," says Lisa Marie. Want them for yourself? They're available in different lengths, colors and textures. Easilites by Easihair; $60 for six-piece set, easihair.com for retailers

A Helmut Lang runway look

HELMUT LANG

Designer quits his own label

Marking the end of an era, the widely respected Austrian-born and NYC-based designer Helmut Lang has resigned as creative director of his self-named label, which is owned by Prada Group.

Reportedly, Lang's resignation was due to clashes over creative direction and frustrations over financial support. His resignation comes just two months after Jil Sander quit her Prada-owned label — for the second time in two years. Whew!

"Helmut Lang is irreplaceable," said Kal Ruttenstein, Bloomingdale's fashion director. "He's a person, not a brand."

YAMUNA

Treat for feet

Relief is here for stiletto-achy toes and arches. Stand on this new foot-saver and teeter back and forth to stretch the intrinsic muscles of your feet and get cramped toes back into proper alignment. Yamuna Body Rolling Foot Saver; $30 with instructional video, yamunabodyrolling.com

KELLY RIPA

Kelly's youth secret

Nothing says happy birthday like an electric shock to the system! At least that's what daytime queen Kelly Ripa seems to think. So taken was she with Tracie Martyn's Resculpting Facial, which uses mild electric currents to stimulate facial muscles ($460, or $265 with an associate), she is gifting them to friends. Intimidated? Tracie's firming serum is a lot less shocking! Tracie Martyn Firming Serum; $175, Barneys
